

PSBJ's 40 Under 40 class of 2021 revealed (Part 1) July 29, 2021

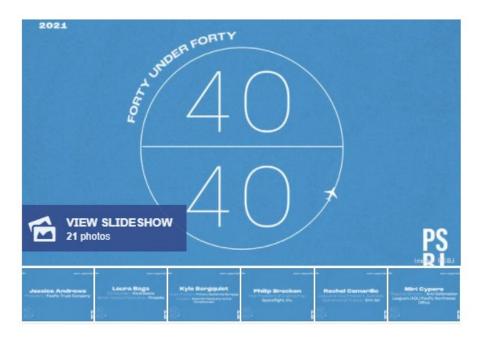

The Puget Sound Business Journal is once again putting a spotlight on those who have established themselves as creative, innovative industry leaders before reaching the age of 40.

The 40 Under 40 program, now in its 23rd year, recognizes leaders in the region who are making major strides in their career while leaving a positive impact and helping shape the Puget Sound region.

This year's 40 Under 40 class includes professionals from health care, aerospace, tech, food services and nonprofits, among other sectors. They will each be profiled in the Sept. 24 edition of the Business Journal and honored at a special reception event.

This year, that event will reach new heights thanks to Alaska Airlines. Honorees will board a special Alaska Airlines flight for a 90-minute joyride over the Seattle area and a toast.

Click through the slideshow below to see the first half of the 2021 40 Under 40 class, with last names beginning A-K:

This year's 40 Under 40 class was selected from 171 nominees. Those nominees were reviewed by a panel of 10 judges, eight of which are previous 40 Under 40 winners. Our judges this year were:

- Lorne Richmond, CEO, Richmond Public Relations (40 Under 40)
- Beth Halvorsen, executive managing director, Colliers International
- Mariah Lincoln, co-founder, Knack Collective (40 Under 40)
- David Wasielewski, managing partner, Din Tai Fung (40 Under 40)
- James Williams, Seattle office managing partner, Perkins Coie (40 Under 40)
- Leslie Feinzaig, founder and CEO, Female Founders Alliance (40 Under 40)
- Rebecca Lovell, CEO, Denali Financial Consulting
- Ben Gilbert, co-founder and managing director, Pioneer Square Labs and PSL Ventures (40 Under 40)
- Raquel Sanchez, managing director of global oncology, Fred Hutch (40 Under 40)
- Kelly Ogilvie, CEO, DeepCell Industries (40 Under 40)

The remaining 20 winners, with last names beginning L-Z, will be revealed on Friday, July 30.

###

